Matt Ryan

VP, Global Solutions & Customer Success at G2

The health score is already too late. AI isn't.

I speak on AI-native customer success, predictive retention, and forward deployed engineering. Every talk is backed by a system I built and ran.

49% to 80%
booked renewal rate at G2

60%
support cost cut

90 to 180 days
of churn warning before renewal

$100K to $11M
forward deployed engineering at Slack

Signature talks

Architecting the AI-First Customer Lifecycle. Agent-delivered, human-led systems from onboarding to renewal. Booked renewal rate from 49% to 80%, activation up from 8.6% to 39.1%, 60% support cost cut.

Churn Is a Product Problem. Leading indicators that surface risk long before the renewal window. 0 to 8 health model, 90 to 180 days of warning, about 80% churn recall versus 60%, and BRR from 49% to 80%.

Preparing Your Enterprise Data for AI Agents. How MCP lets agents act on customer data safely, and the governance that keeps it coherent. Co-launched G2's commercial MCP strategy.

Forward Deployed Engineering. Put technical people next to customers, then productize what recurs. Built Slack's team of 65+ forward deployed architects and grew it from $100K to $11M.

Building Services From Zero. What I learned building services at Slack and G2, and scaling one at Alight: pricing, packaging, and coverage without linear headcount. Review Managed Services from zero to $4M with a 95% renewal rate.

The Board Does Not Care About Effort. Running a services P&L under private equity. Scaled toward a business approaching $200M through an Aon spin-off and Blackstone ownership.

About Matt

Matt Ryan is VP of Global Solutions and Customer Success at G2. He architected G2's AI GTM Operating System: a predictive health score, a 30-day activation model, and 14 live agentic workflows running from onboarding to renewal. He also co-launched G2's commercial MCP strategy.

He started as a software engineer and has spent 20 years building the teams that get enterprise software adopted. At Slack he grew forward deployed engineering from a $100K pilot to an $11M business with 65+ architects. At Alight he scaled a Workday practice toward a business approaching $200M under private equity ownership.
